Immense opportunity for players in the EPC space

The EPC market opportunity is still largely interdependent on the fortunes of the infrastructure sector. Huge investments have been planned in ports, railways, roads and bridges, irrigation, power, and water supply and sanitation. Assuming the share of construction investment at approximately 50 %, this indicates an opportunity for EPC players of ~ ₹ 16 trillion.

Process and Metallurgy

- Strong long term demand from the steel industry to drive the iron ore industry through current headwinds
- Key drivers
 - Increasing consumption rates
 - Rapid Urbanisation
 - Urgent upgradation of infrastructure
 - Steady growth of the construction sector
- Metallurgical sector has attracted USD 7,621 million in cumulative inflows from Apr 2000 – Jun 2013 accounting for ~4% of total FDI inflow. This is set to increase on the back of growing interest in the Indian EPC market.

Municipal Services

The percentage of urban population in India has been increasing at a tremendous pace. However, over a period of 20 years, the percentage of population with access to sanitation has only risen by 7 percentage points. Government investment in the sector has been progressing at a steady pace and is expected to increase substantially given focused funding programs and entry of municipalities of Tier 2 & 3 cities in India.

Improved sanitation facilities (% of population with access)

Renewable Energy (RE)

While there have been recent challenges to investments in Renewable Energy in India, the prospects for growth remain high and sustained traction is expected resulting in several opportunities:

- Over the next five years, the installed capacity of RE is expected to more than double from the level at end-2012
- The share of RE is expected to increase from 12.3% of installed capacity in 2012 to 17.1% of installed capacity in 2017
- SEPC is well-placed to meet the demands of the RE EPC market.
